The Native Learning Center's Tribal Housing Executive Leadership Boot Camp is designed to meet the evolving needs of leadership development in high-accountability, service-driven environments like Tribal Housing. This immersive experience now features cutting-edge Virtual Reality (VR) interaction scenarios, allowing participants to practice strategic communication, conflict resolution, executive presence, and decision-making in simulated high-stakes environments. This innovative approach reflects national best practices in leadership training and significantly improves engagement, confidence, and real-world skill retention.

Led by Dr. William R. Latchford, DCJ – President of Native Peacekeeper Consulting Group, LLC, a Native Woman-Owned Public Safety Consulting Firm; Retired Executive Director of Public Safety/Chief of Police for the Seminole Tribe of Florida; and Co-Director of Florida State University College of Criminology and Criminal Justice Native American Crime and Justice Research & Policy Institute. Don't miss this transformative experience that reflects national best practices and ensures real-world skill retention!

This enhanced Boot Camp is aligned with core leadership objectives:

- Build stronger, more effective teams
- Elevate strategic communication
- Reinforce executive-level decision-making under pressure
- Empower mid-level supervisors and department leads
- Strengthen communication with Tribal leadership, councils, and stakeholders

Participants gain vital skills that promote organizational clarity, professionalism, and accountability.
